

LEROS

Leros Greece is a laid-back island of the Dodecanese chain, located close to Patmos and Lipsi.

To start with, holidays in Leros can't be complete without some village exploration. Leros island has some picturesque little villages worth visiting! Agia Marina with its characteristic flour mill, Pandeli with its medieval fortress, Lakki with its neoclassical architecture and Alinda with its relaxing atmosphere will make you feel as if you're worlds away from the modern civilization. What's more, Leros boasts some beautiful. Both organized and unorganized, beaches! Alinda and Vromolithos are organized, while the island's coastline is fringed with small secluded coves. So, no matter if you seek total isolation or not, in Leros you'll find the perfect beach for you. Talking of beaches, Leros has long been famed for its amazing seabed. Thanks to its reefs, little islets and shipwrecks, scuba diving is one of the must things to do in Leros!

For those who want to dig deep in the island's history, you can visit monuments such as the Medieval Fortress above Pandeli and the War Museum, which is housed inside an authentic World War II tunnel!

Leros Greece is truly a unique island!

Leros Things to do

Over the last years, Leros is developing as a scuba diving destination. In fact, the sea bottom of Leros is filled with old wrecks, some dating from the ancient times, especially the wrecks in the sea region between Leros island and Kalymnos island.

Another enjoyable thing to do in Leros is hiking, especially in spring and autumn, when the weather is not hot. Old footpaths cross the island and lead to secluded beaches, small chapels, Medieval castles, and seaside villages.

Leros beaches

There are both frequented and secluded beaches in Leros. Agia Marina, Vromolithos and Alinda are the most organized Leros beaches, while there are many other quiet places to relax around the island.
